

History 1311 (Hist 1311)

Spring 2019

(EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT THIS COURSE IS INCLUDED IN THIS SYLLABUS – MAKE SURE YOU READ IT!)

Dr. Anson

Spring 2019

There are no prerequisites for this course.

Office Hours: 8-9AM MWF; or by appointment, or see me before or after class, or e-mail (emanson@ualr.edu). All my electronic communication outside of class will be conducted through your UALR email account.

History 1311 is a survey course of World Civilization from the dawn of civilization through the Protestant Reformation.

Course Objectives:

- Students will demonstrate knowledge of historical events and actors, including the development of political, economic, and social structures, and the development of scientific, mathematical, and technological knowledge to 1600.
- Students will demonstrate understanding of the impact of historical events and actors on the human experience over time, including the present.
- Students will be able to demonstrate the causes and effects in the rise and fall of empires and the development of civilizations, including their effects on different ethnic, social, political, and economic groups within societies.
- Students will be able to discuss changes in science and technology to 1600, and understand how technological changes impact civilization.
- Students will be able to communicate historical knowledge in written and oral forms.

- Students will use critical thinking and analytical skills to examine primary and secondary source documents.
- Students will connect and compare primary and secondary source documents from multiple perspectives.
- Students will understand the principles of academic integrity, including how to cite sources.
- Students will investigate the role of diverse populations in shaping the history of civilization.
- Students will be able to discuss multiple perspectives on the past, and the ethical implications of the uses of history in the public sphere.
- Students will acquire an understanding of the creation and evolution of the beliefs, values, and the institutions of the modern world through an examination of their past. To include the ability to identify similarities and differences in separate cultures and civilizations and in the same culture or civilization over time.
- Students will gain a clear understanding of the process by which historians make their determinations of what happened in the past and why it happened.
- Students will develop or enhance their ability to write analytically and cogently. To include the ability to present a thesis and organize information to justify it.

Required Reading:

The following text is required:

Anson, Miller, Bilsky, Hanson. A Brief History of Civilization: A free version will be emailed to those who enroll in the course. DO NOT PURCHASE A HARD COPY OR DOWNLOAD FROM THE WEB. THIS TEXT IS UPDATED EVERY SEMESTER.

Examinations and Papers:

1. Title and Thesis exercises: During the first and second weeks of the course students will have the opportunity to earn 10 possible bonus points, five for each of the two exercises. These are meant as preliminaries to the major requirement of the course, the brief papers (See below in #2), which will follow. For these early exercises the student is to read a selection and think about a particular question asked about the reading. These questions are found at the end of each reading and the student needs to select one and only one to use in creating a title and a thesis statement. The title must clearly reflect the content of the question which you are answering, sufficiently clear that someone not familiar with the material will know the topic; for example, if the question was asking why was Alexander the Great so successful in conquering the Persian Empire, your title might be Alexander's Conquest of the Persian Empire, or The Causes for Alexander the Great's Success, or What Makes a Great Conqueror? Alexander of Macedonia and the Conquest of the Persian Empire. A thesis is an introductory paragraph (or summary statement) that briefly, but succinctly, answers the question being asked, highlighting your main points and main conclusions. For example, again with respect to the hypothetical question concerning Alexander the Great, a thesis might state the following: Alexander the Great succeeded in conquering the Persian Empire because of the legacies of a unified state, a superior military, and domination of the southern Greek world, all left to him by his father Philip; inherent weaknesses in the Persian Empire, and Alexander's own tactical and strategic skills. Your thesis basically states what you intend to prove in the body of the subsequent paper. The first reading is found on pp. 7-23 and possible questions on page 23; the second is found in the textbook, pp. 24-32, with the questions on page 32. Bonus point exercises cannot be made up, if not turned in on the due date for any reason, including late enrollment. Your earned bonus points will at the end of the semester be added to your average percentage score as determined below.

2. Brief Papers/Homework: Each student must submit at least 10, one-two page papers, printed or equivalent length in clear long hand, answering one of the questions that follow the assigned primary source reading selections in the text or the single question that accompanies each of the map/quantitative history exercises (Note that the map questions may have multiple parts, each of which must be answered.). There are 20 such exercises (primary source/map/quantitative history) and students may hand in as many of these as they wish; their ten highest scores will then be used to calculate that paper portion of their grade. Answers to the questions must be based on the material in the reading, not on the introduction to the reading, nor the textbook narrative, nor on outside sources (including internet), nor on lecture. All statements relating to the source or map or quantitative material must be referenced with in-text references. For example, when you are supporting a point with information from the text or map or quantitative exercise, you need to note the internal numbered divisions in the primary source (for example, the Biblical selections are by book, chapter, and verse; Hildegard's letters by title; Hammurabi's Code, by numbered laws; Phaedo, by consecutively numbered sections), or with the maps, the page number or map name where the material appears. For the quantitative exercise you need to refer to the tables. You must use the most precise reference system available. Simply place in parentheses immediately after your statement of fact a reference (i. e. Gen 6:13, page 2, Phaedo 113, etc.). It is not necessary to quote the material; you should rephrase it in your own words. Only use quotations where the actual words are crucial or occasionally for emphasis. Students are expected to do their own papers; no group efforts. Papers must be handed in either before or on their due date; no late papers will be accepted. They may be submitted in class or e-mailed to me on or before the end of your respective class on the due date (not faxed-- faxed papers will not be accepted). E-mailing papers should not, however, be a regular practice, but only used on rare occasions, when you are unable to come to class. Papers will be handed back to students only in person, typically in class. Please keep your returned and graded papers. If there are any disputes over papers more than a week after a paper's due date, you must be able to produce a graded paper. It is advisable to complete more than the minimum ten papers. This is both because it is difficult to pick papers on which you will do well. It is best to hedge your bets. Also, if you complete more than ten papers, your highest 11th paper score will be treated as an extra credit assignment worth an additional 6% of its score to be added, as with the title and thesis assignments, after the final calculation of your graded assignments.

Most students who fail to complete this course successfully do so by not turning in at least ten papers.

Paper format: Each paper must have a title and a thesis statement (see above in #1). The body of the subsequent paper then supports and defends this thesis with evidence, and is subsequently followed by a conclusion that refers back to your original thesis, summarizing your major conclusions. This basic format is that followed for social science and scientific papers, and for business reports. If students wish, they may turn in thesis statements only for any primary source or map exercise two class meetings prior to the particular assignment's due date. These will be examined and commented on and handed back at the next class meeting. While papers may be turned in early, they will not be returned until all such papers are returned. No rough drafts can be submitted before final submission of the paper. Questions about particular assignments may be asked in class, before or after class, during office hours or arranged meetings, or by email.

As noted above, answers to the questions must be based on the material in the reading, not on the introduction to the reading, nor the textbook narrative, nor on outside sources (including internet), nor on lecture. Again, all statements relating to the source, or map, or quantitative exercise, material must be referenced with in-text references.

3. Midterm and Final: There will be a midterm and a final examination. The midterm and the final will consist of a first section devoted to identifications about which the student will write a brief paragraph. There will be some choice among these identifications. An identification is the name of a person, place, or thing, covered in the text or in class. The remainder of the exam will be devoted to one or more essay questions. A group of potential essay questions for the midterm and final are attached to this syllabus; the essay questions for the midterm and final will be drawn from these. Students are encouraged to think about these questions as soon as the material relating to specific questions has been covered. Students may turn in practice essays, thesis statements, outlines of possible answers to essays, in advance of the exam. These will be handed back to the students with written comments; no grade will be recorded. These cannot, however, be directly used on the day of the exam, nor can notes, text, or other materials. These exams are not "open book" or open I-phone exams. Notes, books are to be put away in book bags and/or placed under the desk; phones are to be displayed prominently on your desk.

Class Attendance: Class attendance is required; the student is held responsible for all reading assignments and all material covered and announcements made in class. Class attendance will be taken periodically beginning after the first week of class. When taken, it will be at the start of class. Those arriving late will be recorded as absent. Each student will be permitted three unexcused absences without penalty. Each unexcused absence after three will result in one point being deducted from your overall final grade percentage (see below). Excused absences include for illness, accidents, family emergencies, military activities, job requirements, court appearances, car breakdowns, and official UALR activities. Sleeping in, forgetting class, TV viewing, chatting with friends, and so on will not be considered excused. Everyone is expected to be present at the time class starts and remain until it is dismissed. If for great and good reason you are either late or have to leave early, please enter or leave quietly and as inconspicuously as possible, i.e. please do not bang on the door or walk across the front of the room.

Note taking: Part of attending class is to take notes. While you may record the class, this is a very inefficient way to take notes. It is best to listen carefully and briefly write down important points. If you are unfamiliar with note-taking, please review <https://learningcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/effective-note-taking-in-class/> .

Please take this course seriously. While the course can be retaken with the subsequent grade replacing the first, you will in essence be paying for the same course twice. Also, whether you receive an F or a W (for withdrawal), both may negatively affect your financial aid or educational grants. If you are having difficulties with the course, either see me, your academic advisor, or one of the History Department's peer tutors for help, whichever you find most comfortable.

Electronic Equipment: Cell phones must be turned off or put on vibrate when in class, unless you use them to take notes. Please do not talk or text on the phone in class. If an emergency is signified, please leave class quietly to take the call. Computers may be used for the same purpose. It is also permissible to record lectures. It is preferable that you take notes. Listening to the same material twice or more takes up a lot of time that would be better spent studying. If you have difficulty taking notes, I would advise that you do so anyway and at the same time record the material. Then, after class, while listening, go over your notes and fill in any gaps. Over time you should be able to do away with the recorder. See Note taking above.

Make-ups: Only the final exam, if missed for a significant reason, may be made up. There will be no make-up midterms or papers. As noted, students may turn in as many as 20 papers on different primary sources or map exercises/quantitative history exercises. Their ten highest scores will be used to determine that portion of their grade. Students failing to turn in at least ten papers will have zeros recorded for each missing paper grade so as to total ten grades. If the midterm exam is missed, the midterm component of your final grade will be added to that of the final (the final will then be worth 40% of the final grade). Additionally, if your grade is higher on the final than on the midterm, your midterm grade will be dropped and your final will then be worth 40% of your final course grade.

General Regulations: Final grades will be computed on the following basis:

60% for brief papers (this means that each of your ten highest paper grades is 6% of your final grade)

20% for the midterm (will be dropped if student fails to take the exam or scores higher on the final; 20% then added to weight of final)

20% (or 40% if midterm is dropped or missed) for the final

0-10% for points scored on the two Title and Thesis exercises

0-6% for an eleventh highest paper

1% deducted for each recorded unexcused absence after three

All testing and final grade computations on the basis of:

90 - 100% = A 60 - 69% = D
80 - 89% = B 0 - 59% = F
70 - 79% = C (Grades will not be curved)

No incompletes will be given unless approved by me prior to May 10, 2019 and then only the final exam may be taken at a later date. Moreover, incompletes will only be given when circumstances beyond the control of the student prevent the student from taking the final either at the scheduled time or before the end of the semester. Incompletes cannot be given for the entire semester's work. An incomplete is not a substitute for a failing grade. Finally, this class cannot be taken on a credit/no credit or pass/fail basis.

Working hours: Students on average should expect to spend two-three hours outside of class studying for every hour in class. A twelve-hour load in the regular semester or six hours in summer school should be regarded as equivalent to at least a 40-hour a week job. A few students may be able to spend less time, but many may require more hours. If you are employed fulltime and/or have a family, you should take the above into consideration when planning your academic schedule.

Students with disabilities: Your success in this class is important to me, and it is the policy and practice of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock to create inclusive learning environments in accordance with federal and state law. If you have a documented disability and need an accommodation as a result of that disability, please contact me privately at the beginning of the course, so that we can discuss with the Disability Resource Center (DRC) how to meet your specific needs and the academic and technical requirements of the course. The DRC offers resources and coordinates reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities. Determining the reasonable accommodations you might need is based upon a thorough intake interview by the DRC and a deliberative process between the DRC and your instructor. Thus, if you have a documented disability, please contact me and the DRC, at 501-569-3143 (V/TTY) or 501-683-7629 (VP). For more information, please visit the DRC website at www.ualr.edu/disability. The chair of the department offering this course is also available to assist with accommodations.

Academic Dishonesty:

Such dishonesty can be any of the following (the following list was copied from <https://sa.berkeley.edu/conduct/integrity/definition>):

Cheating

Cheating is defined as fraud, deceit, or dishonesty in an academic assignment, or using or attempting to use materials, or assisting others in using materials that are prohibited or inappropriate in the context of the academic assignment in question, such as:

- Copying or attempting to copy from others during an exam or on an assignment.
- Communicating answers with another person during an exam.
- Using unauthorized materials, prepared answers, written notes, or concealed information during an exam.

- Allowing others to do an assignment or portion of an assignment for you, including the use of a commercial term-paper service.
- Collaborating on an exam or assignment with any other person without prior approval from the instructor.
- Taking an exam for another person or having someone take an exam for you.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is defined as use of intellectual material produced by another person without acknowledging its source, for example:

- Wholesale copying of passages from works of others into your homework without acknowledgment.
- Use of the views, opinions, or insights of another without acknowledgment.
- Paraphrasing of another person's characteristic or original phraseology, metaphor, or other literary device without acknowledgment.

Course Materials

Selling, distributing, website posting, or publishing course lecture notes, handouts, readers, recordings, or other information provided by an instructor, or using them for any commercial purpose without the express permission of the instructor.

Theft or Damage of Intellectual Property Sabotaging or stealing another person's assignment, book, paper, notes, experiment, project, electronic hardware or software.

- Obtaining a copy of an exam or assignment prior to its approved release by the instructor.

Anyone who engages in such activity will receive an "F" in the course and will be turned over to the Academic Integrity and Grievance Committee for University disciplinary action.

Students with questions about their grades: Students with questions or complaints about the grading of their papers or exams should write out what the problem is and hand it in after class along with the paper or exam in question. This is the forum in which such matters are to be handled, not during class, nor during office hours. Questions regarding the material covered in papers or in class should be asked in class, out-of-class in person, or by e-mail. In short, do not argue about your grade in other than written form, but do ask about material read or discussed in class in whatever forum you are comfortable. Even with respect to the exams or papers, if there are substantive questions regarding the material, things you do not understand, do ask questions. Questions requiring written form are those concerning number of points given for a particular item (in short, any question that begins why didn't I get more credit for this?). For questions of this kind you do need to present in written form an argument supporting your contention pointing with references to the material in your exam or paper that you believe defend your position. Remember one of the objectives of this course is to improve writing and analytical skills.

University Inclement Weather Policy

1. During inclement weather, UA Little Rock will make a decision whether or not to close based on all available information.
2. The chancellor will decide whether or not conditions warrant canceling classes and activities and closing the campus or whether classes and activities will be canceled but with specified campus offices open. Online or web-enhanced classes will continue as scheduled at the discretion of the faculty member.

3. The UA Little Rock website, UA Little Rock email, the university's main telephone number (501.569.3000), and the Rave campus alert notification system are the official means of communicating information concerning weather-related closings.

4. When necessary, the university will announce a separate decision about canceling night classes (those classes starting at 4:20 p.m. or later) by 2 p.m., if possible.

5. The Policy Advisory Council of the University Assembly will recommend to the chancellor if and when missed undergraduate and graduate class days should be made up. In the event that the university is closed during a final examination day, the provost, in consultation with the Faculty Senate president, will reschedule any missed graduate or undergraduate final examinations with the exception of online exams which will continue as scheduled.

6. Weather and road conditions vary from place to place. Employees and students are expected to exercise good judgment regarding the safety of travel when road conditions are affected by the weather.

FINAL

10AM Class: Wednesday, May 8, 10:30-12:30

9AM Class: Friday, May 10, 8-10

MIDTERM QUESTIONS

1. How does Post Exilic Judaism differ from Pre-Exilic Judaism? How are they alike?
2. Compare the Old Testament readings with the Phaedo. How do they differ? How are they alike?
3. Compare Mesopotamian and Egyptian civilization. What are the differences? The similarities? How might you account for the differences and similarities?
4. Compare Phaedo and Paul's Letter to the Romans. What differences do you note between the teachings of Plato and those of Paul? What similarities?
5. Compare the poleis of the Athenians and the Spartans. How are they alike? Different?
6. Compare the values found in the Iliad and those in the Book of Matthew. How are they alike? Different?
7. Compare the fall of the Roman Republic and the fall of the Roman Empire. What are the similarities? The differences?
8. Why is Christianity so successful in converting the Roman Empire?

History 1311
Final Exam Questions

Part I

1. Why is there a Protestant Reformation? Why does it occur in the 16th century?
2. According to Buddha's first sermon what are the Four Noble Truths. What do they mean and how are they supposed to help achieve Nirvana?
3. How does the Early Middle Ages (500-1000) differ from the High Middle Ages (1000-1300)?
4. The Renaissance means rebirth. What was supposed to be reborn? Was it? Or was this more a time of innovation than a return to some past era?

Part II

1. How does Islam, as set forth in your reading from the Quran, differ from Christianity as presented in your reading from the Books of Matthew and Romans?
2. How does the Early Middle Ages (500-1000) differ from the Roman Empire in the time of Augustus?
3. Compare the theory and practice of Greek Polis government to that of England during the reign of Richard I. What are the basic institutions and their functions?
4. Compare the teachings of Christianity as set forth in the Books of Matthew and Romans with the teachings of Buddha as found in the First Sermon. What are the similarities? The differences?
