

HIST 2312-01

U.S. HISTORY SINCE 1877

Dr. Barclay Key (btkey@ualr.edu)
Fall 2019

407 Stabler Hall
MWF, 11:00-11:50 a.m.

“I THINK THAT A MAN AT ANY MOMENT OF ACTION IS THE LIVING SUM OF HIS PAST... THAT MAN AT THE VERY MOMENT AT WHICH HE IS DOING SOMETHING, HE DID THAT PARTICULAR THING EXACTLY IN THAT WAY BECAUSE OF THE HUNDRED YEARS BEFORE HIM THAT MADE HIM... BECAUSE HE IS THE SUM OF HIS ANCESTORS AND HIS CONDITION, HIS TIMES.” —WILLIAM FAULKNER (1957)

WELCOME!

Regardless of your background, major, or career plans, I am pleased to have you in this course and believe that you will benefit from this study of U.S. history. My goal is to make this course one of your favorites at UALR. We have much to learn!

To that end, we must cultivate our interest in people’s stories. Everyone has a story to tell. Today, our lives are defined by the stories that we create daily. Perhaps you have stories to share, both joyful and painful, about your family and friends, about your beliefs, about your travels or hobbies, or about your experiences at work or in college. In a sense, our identities are defined by the stories we live and create for ourselves. The same is true for history. Our subjects, the people we study, have stories to tell about themselves and their times. Historians tease these stories out of available sources, explain why they are important, and debate their meaning and significance. Such activities broadly define my goal for us: learning stories from the past and discussing their significance for understanding U.S. history.

Historical narratives involve groups of people and individuals. The same will be true of this course. At times, we will discuss numbers—the percentage of the electorate who voted for a presidential candidate, for example—but we will also give attention to individual stories and what they might mean for understanding U.S. history. When we generalize with statistics, we encourage you to consider the individuals who comprise those statistics and what stories they might share, if given the opportunity. When we consider individuals, we will want to experience their lives with them, as best we can, and engage their worlds, imagining the options that were before them and discussing why they made the choices that they did. At the same time, we will want to ask critical questions of their narratives and the specific contexts from which they spoke to determine the degree to which their stories are indicative of larger historical trends.

CATALOG DESCRIPTION

Description, analysis, and explanation of the political, social, economic, and diplomatic events to the present time. Special attention is devoted to the forces of modernity and the impact of cultural pluralism on traditional institutions. Major topics for study include industrialization; agrarianism; labor; immigration; reform movements; total and limited war; economic theory and practice; and the U.S.’s role in world affairs. Three credit hours.

COURSE DESCRIPTION AND FORMAT

Please know that I have high expectations of myself as your instructor, as the one who bears the responsibility of helping you learn and think about the past. Likewise, I have high expectations of you, especially with regard to reading, thinking, and writing. I have no interest in telling you what to think, but I insist that you think logically, read closely, and write well. I will be pleased to assist you in these tasks. By maintaining these high expectations of each other, I am confident that we will learn much about history and perhaps about ourselves.

Reading assignments, discussions, lectures, and audiovisual materials will facilitate our exploration of U.S. history from the 1870s to the present. I am particularly interested in asking a lot of questions and proposing answers with you, so most every class meeting will include time devoted to inquiries of texts and each other.

Due to the constraints of a survey course and the immense amount of material that we could potentially analyze, we will give special attention to several themes that resonate throughout this period. Namely, we will contemplate the idea of “race” and its pertinence to U.S. history; the evolution of government bureaucracies in responding to the needs and wishes of the governed; the evolution and globalization of the U.S. economy; conceptions of nationhood and citizenship; competing constructions of femininity and masculinity in society; relationships between humans and the environment; the pervasive influence of technological innovations on society; and international relations.

As you might imagine, history can be contentious, and there will be occasions in this course when we will have disagreements among ourselves. Of course, I expect everyone to listen closely and carefully consider other opinions as your own ideas take shape. If you disagree with someone, you will have an opportunity to explain why. Together, we will sharpen our historical understanding and improve our critical thinking skills.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Students will

- develop empathy. \ 'em-pə-thē\ : “the action of understanding, being aware of, being sensitive to, and vicariously experiencing the feelings, thoughts, and experience of another of either the past or present without having the feelings, thoughts, and experience fully communicated in an objectively explicit manner”
- analyze the continuing interpretation and application of the U.S. Constitution.
- learn about the key incidents and concepts that define the history of the U.S. since 1877.
- demonstrate understanding of the diversity and complexity of events, and intercultural interactions in U.S. history from 1877 to the present.
- be able to communicate historical knowledge in written and oral forms.
- use critical thinking and analytical skills to examine primary and secondary source documents.
- connect and compare primary and secondary source documents from multiple perspectives.
- use evidence from written and visual sources to draw conclusions and support an argument.
- learn to locate and distinguish between primary and secondary sources.
- evaluate sources to determine if they are appropriate, scholarly sources.
- understand the principles of academic integrity, including how to cite sources.
- recognize the effects of civility, and its absence, in shaping the decisions of democratic government in U.S. history since 1877.
- study the continuing development and function of the U.S. government since 1877 and investigate the ongoing quest for justice in American society since the Reconstruction era.
- learn about the development of the rights and responsibilities of U.S. citizenship and the role of citizens and non-citizens in shaping the American past.
- evaluate constructions of femininity and masculinity in U.S. history.
- assess the relationships between the U.S. and other nations.
- critique elements of popular culture (including religion, music, television, and film) in U.S. history.
- analyze how historical narratives are created and evolve over time.

REQUIRED READING

You must acquire these books to successfully complete all assignments. They are available from the usual outlets, including online stores, but please understand that you need the first two immediately.

- Eric Foner, ed., Voices of Freedom: A Documentary History, vol. II, 5th edition (ISBN 9780393614503). Available as an e-book and on two-hour reserve in the library.
 - Why was it assigned? I prefer to avoid traditional textbooks because they are too expensive. Instead we will be guided this semester by documents from the past, composed by the people who actually lived in the eras that we will study.
- Karen Cox, Dixie's Daughters: The United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Preservation of Confederate Culture (ISBN 9780813064130). Available as an e-book.
 - Why was it assigned? Commemorations of the Civil War have recently provoked heated debates. This book will help us understand the women behind many of the Confederate monuments that dot the southern landscape.
- Elaine Tyler May, Fortress America: How We Embraced Fear and Abandoned Democracy (ISBN 9780465055920). Available as an audiobook and e-book.
 - Why was it assigned? Fear is a pervasive, if underappreciated, force in history. This book offers a fascinating account of how fear molded the U.S. from World War II to the present.

OPTIONAL READING

- Eric Foner, Give Me Liberty!: An American History, Vol. 2 (ISBN 9780393920314). This book is a traditional textbook that accompanies Voices of Freedom. It is overpriced but if you think that you might become a social studies teacher or if you feel more comfortable following course topics with a traditional textbook, then you should purchase it from an online store. Better yet, ask me for a textbook, and I may have one to give you.
- I normally don't provide extra credit opportunities, but if you want to read one or more of these books and write something, let's talk.
 - Michelle Alexander, The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration in the Age of Colorblindness (ISBN 9781595586438).
 - Ta-Nehisi Coates, Between the World and Me (ISBN 9780812993547).
 - Alfredo Corchado, Homelands: Four Friends, Two Countries, and the Fate of the Great Mexican-American Migration (ISBN 9781632865540).

REQUIRED VIEWING

You must view the films listed in the schedule and complete the accompanying quizzes that are explained below. The films are available online for free. If you do not have adequate Internet access at home, then you may use one of the computers in the library or History Department. Just bring your own headphones. If one film becomes unavailable during the semester, then we will find a suitable replacement. I will e-mail each film and quiz approximately one week before the due date.

ASSIGNMENTS

- Read actively: You must complete the required readings! Reading will provide the means for us to "hear" people's stories, and I have chosen books that will captivate your imaginations. Reading actively will require you to engage authors, ask questions of texts, and immerse yourself in the worlds they describe.
- Regularly attend class: I expect you to be here! How will we know what you think, if you're not present? Indeed, your absence may prevent a classmate from learning something new or looking at a topic in a different perspective. Meanwhile, your participation grade depends on your attendance.

- Actively participate in discussions: Not only do we want you here, but we also want you to speak! You should remain actively engaged in class discussions, sharing your thoughts about the people and places we explore. You should also come to class prepared to ASK QUESTIONS about the reading assignments. I might call on you whether or not your hand is raised! [Insert evil laugh here.]
- Complete book tests: Simple tests over Dixie's Daughters (Wednesday, September 18) and Fortress America (Friday, November 22) will show that you read carefully. You may anticipate multiple-choice and true/false questions.
- Complete reading quizzes: Six unannounced quizzes will assess your reading of Voices of Freedom. You may anticipate multiple-choice questions. Regardless of the circumstances, missed quizzes may not be made up, but I will drop your lowest reading quiz grade at the end of the semester.
- Complete film quizzes: Although we are scheduled to meet on MWF, we will not always meet in the classroom on Fridays. Every other week, you will view a documentary film and submit a quiz instead of meeting for class. The schedule in this syllabus indicates when you will view films and complete brief quizzes about them. I will e-mail a link to the film and attach each quiz about one week before it is due, and you may simply e-mail your answers back to me. You should anticipate fill-in-the-blank and short answer questions. Late quizzes will not be accepted. Missed quizzes may not be made up, but I will drop your lowest film quiz at the end of the semester.
- Complete two writing assignments
 - Why? essay (400-500 words): Choose an interesting document from Chapters 15-20 in Voices of Freedom. Carefully read the document, accounting for the author, audience, date, and historical context. Then write an essay that explains why the author said or wrote these words. Compose your essay in Word, and send it to btkey@ualr.edu as an attachment by noon on Friday, September 27.
 - Analyze Jet and *Life (1,000-1,200 words): First, choose a month and year that you wish to study. Your choice may be no earlier than November 1951 and no later than December 1972. Second, read through the issues of Jet and Life for the entire month. (They are available in the library or online through Google Books.) Then write an essay that compares and contrasts these two magazines for that month. Consider how the same events may have been reported differently or ignored by one or the other magazine, or how advertisements enticed readers. Compose your essay in Word, and send it to btkey@ualr.edu as an attachment by noon on Wednesday, October 30.
- Complete final exam: You will have a comprehensive final exam that poses broad questions, enabling you to show off your new understanding of U.S. history. The exam will consist of essay questions, so each student should bring a blue book. The final exam will be Friday, December 6, at 10:30 a.m.

A NOTE ON WRITING

Please understand that I have the highest expectations for your writing assignments. Poor grammar, misspelled words, and the like are unacceptable in a college class. I will be glad to assist you in writing good papers, but I also urge you to utilize the University Writing Center. See <http://ualr.edu/writingcenter/> for details.

STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES

Your success in this class is important to me, and it is the policy and practice of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock to create inclusive learning environments consistent with federal and state law. If you have a documented disability (or need to document a disability) and need an accommodation, please contact me privately as soon as possible so that we can discuss with the Disability Resource Center (DRC) how to meet your specific needs and the requirements of the course. The DRC offers resources and coordinates reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities. Reasonable accommodations are established through an interactive process among you, your instructor(s) and the DRC. Thus, if you have a disability, please contact me and/or the DRC, at 501-569-3143 (V/TTY) or 501-683-7629 (VP). For more information, please visit the DRC website at ualr.edu/disability. (UA Little Rock Policy 404.9)

RULES THAT I FEEL COMPELLED TO INCLUDE EVEN THOUGH YOU'RE ADULTS

- Class will begin promptly at 11 a.m. Compulsive tardiness is annoying and rude. Be on time.
- Except for emergencies or answering historical questions, I prefer that you not use laptops or phones during class. Among other reasons, see Susan Dynarski, "Laptops Are Great. But Not During a Lecture or a Meeting," New York Times, November 22, 2017, available at <https://www.nytimes.com/2017/11/22/business/laptops-not-during-lecture-or-meeting.html>.
- I will not accept late papers or quizzes, so please carefully note due dates and times.
- Plagiarism will not be tolerated. Please consult with me if you have any questions about what constitutes plagiarism, as excuses (especially ignorance) will not be accepted. You may also wish to consult the university's policies on academic integrity, available at <http://ualr.edu/deanofstudents/index.php/home/academic-integrity/>.

CONTACT INFORMATION

E-mail is the best way to contact me. You may expect a reply within a few hours if you e-mail during regular business hours. If you e-mail after regular business hours, I will reply on the following business day. You are also welcome to visit my office with or without an appointment.
